Congress Asked to Establish a Great Breeding Preserve

Congressman Curtis Wants Permission From "Buffalo" Jones, of Kansas, to Take Seventy-Five Head From the Goodnight Ranch.

Washington, Feb. 4.—(Special correspondence of The Republican)—A census of the full-blooded buffalo now known to exist in the United States brings the number up to about 300, though the count is not believed to be accurate. With the exception of the small herd in the National Yellowstone Park, all of these buffalo are in a greater or less degree of captivity, ranging from the small animal houses of the zoological parks in the eastern cities to the vast inclosures of some of the western cattle ranches. It may be said that all the buffalo are really in captivity, for even those in the Yellowstone Park are closely watched, and if, for any reason, they show inclination to stray beyond the bounds of the park, they are driven back by the soldiers and game keepers in charge. With the exception of these Yellowstone Park animals and a few in the public collections, the small and scattered herds are owned by private parties, some of them merely as a fallow or as additions to well kept parks, others for commercial purposes.

The United States government has never made formal attempt to prevent the extinction of the buffalo, or has assisted in any marked degree the efforts of private parties to propagate the species. Congressman Curtis of Kansas has introduced a bill this winter which represents the first considerable effort to secure government aid in this direction. His bill is entitled, "A bill to set apart a preserve for the American bison and for other purposes." The bill authorizes and directs the secretary of the interior to set apart a tract of land containing 100,000 acres in the county of Elbert in the state of Colorado, to be known as the "American bison preserve," and to lease this tract to such person as in his judgment can carry out the provisions of the proposed law for a term of twenty years. The lessee is to be given the right to fence and control the land and to use it for the breeding and grazing of American bison, and for the purpose of propagating other animals. The lessee is also to be allowed to put upon this land the necessary domestic animals requisite to care for the bison and for the purpose of experimenting in the raising of such bison with domestic cattle.

The lessee, among other conditions is required to deliver to the United States government on board the cars at the nearest railway station two full-blooded bison each year after the first year of the lease, the bison to be both male and female, or one male and one female, at the discretion of the secretary of the interior. He is to be required to keep his herd of full-blooded bison up to not less than two hundred during the period of the lease.

To be eligible as a lessee, the party receiving this tract from the government must place upon the land within one year from the passage of the bill not less than twenty full-blooded American bison of which not less than half shall be females, which bison shall be maintained for breeding purposes. The bill makes it unlawful during the existence of the lease for any other person to come to kill or injure any of the animals, or to hunt any kind of game within the inclosed boundary, without the written consent of the owner, and it is made unlawful also for any person other than the owner to kill, injure or dispose of any bison within the territory of New Mexico. Penalties are provided for violation of this act, and the fences and other property of the proposed buffalo ranch are fully protected by special legislation.

While no names are mentioned in this bill, it is known that the measure is for the benefit of "Buffalo" Jones, the noted Kansas hunter and trapper, for he is the only man in the United States today who could comply with the terms of the law as now proposed, requiring twenty full-blooded animals to be placed upon the range within a year from the passage of the act.

Mr. Jones is now on the Goodnight ranch in Texas, devoting himself to experimenting in breeding buffalo cattle or half-breed buffalo. Charles Goodnight, the famous Panhandle cattleman, has a herd of about seventy-five buffalo, and Jones has already succeeded in raising from these half a dozen half-breed buffalo cattle. These have been separated from the full-bloods and given names of their own and multiplied. The half-breed animals bear a strong resemblance to the full-blooded buffalo, but they are thoroughly gentle, and have all the habits of domestic cattle. It is believed by those who have seen them that they will furnish a valuable article of commerce in their hides, which resemble the new high-priced buffalo robes, and that they will make a hardy, self-sustaining breed of animals for ranges in the extreme north and in other places where the climate necessitates the highest order of "rustling" ability.

The next largest herd of buffalo in private ownership is one at Fort Pierre, South Dakota, which numbers about fifty. They are owned by James Philip, generally known through the cattle country as "Scotty" Philip. This herd also contains a number of half-breed buffalo cattle, produced in the same way as those at the Panhandle. Mr. Philip's herd represents the result of a hunt in the Little Missouri country about twenty years ago, when Frederick Dupree, an old French hunter, in company with a band of Indians and half-breeds, captured a half dozen calves. Mr. Dupree allowed these buffalo to range with the Cheyenne and Arapaho country, except that he allowed none of them to stray. When Dupree died the buffalo were sold to Philip after a fruitless attempt to sell them to the United States government. These buffalo in Mr. Philip's herd have had practically the freedom which they would have enjoyed before their nominal captivity, and they have developed to full perfection. One bill was sold

To Keep Their Digestion Perfect Nothing is so Safe and Pleasant as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

Thousands of men and women have found Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the safest and most reliable preparation for any form of indigestion or stomach trouble. Thousands of people who are not sick, but are well and wish to keep well, take Stuart's Tablets after every meal to insure perfect digestion and avoid trouble.

But it is not generally known that the Tablets are just as good and wholesome for little folks as for their elders. Little children who are pale, thin and have no appetite, or do not grow or thrive, should use the tablets after eating, and will derive great benefit from them.

Mrs. G. M. Crisley, 223 Washington St., Hoboken, New Jersey, writes: "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets just fill the bill for children as well as for older folks. I've had the best of luck with them. My three-year-old child takes them as readily as candy. I have only to say, tablets and she drops every thing else and runs for them."

A Buffalo mother, a recent time ago, who despaired of the life of her baby, who was so delighted with the results from giving the child these tablets that she went before the notary public of Erie Co., N. Y., and made the following affidavit:

"I, the undersigned, do hereby certify that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were recommended to me for my two-month-old baby, which was sick and puny and the doctors said was suffering from indigestion. I took the child to the hospital, but there found no relief. A friend mentioned Stuart's Tablets and I procured a box from my druggist and used only the large sweet lozenges in the box and was delighted to find that they were just the thing for my baby. I feel justified in saying that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets saved my child's life."

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of April, 1897.

HENRY KARRS, Notary Public in and for Erie Co., N. Y. For babies, no matter how young or delicate, the tablets will accomplish wonders in increasing flesh, appetite and growth. Use only the large sweet lozenges in every box. Put child to bed and no parent should neglect the use of this safe remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles if the child is suffering in any way, or if the mother has any doubt.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been known for years as the best preparation for all stomach troubles whether adults or infants.

Out of this herd for show purposes, twenty-five years ago for $100. They are now owned by a party named the ranch lands in a herd of the Missouri river, about eight miles from Fort Pierre. The fence which retains them is of woven wire, seven feet high, with posts five feet apart, and over all are strong barbed wires.

Another valuable herd of buffalo is owned by C. E. Conrad of Kalispell, Montana. He now has thirty-seven head of full-blooded buffalo in a 50-acre field, one mile from the town in which he lives. Mr. Conrad has found that the buffaloes raised in captivity fail to develop as well as those in the wild state. The striking difference is in the body between the hips and shoulders. The animals raised in confinement have shorter bodies and lack the muscle which gave the appearance of strength to their wild ancestors.

It is difficult for those who remember the vast herds of buffalo which ranged the western states but a few years ago to realize that it is at all possible to prevent the total extinction of the species. Not over thirty years ago trains on the transcontinental railroads were often stopped to allow thousands of these animals to cross the track. Twenty-five years ago it was not unusual for the Indians and half-breeds of the northwest to indulge in the great buffalo "killa" from which they secured hundreds of hides for shipment to Missouri river points. It was not over twenty years ago that it was still an ordinary occurrence for hunters to stumble across an old buffalo bull, living his solitary life in the bad lands of the Missouri river drainage. As late as 1884 the steamers left Fort Benton, the head of navigation on the Missouri river, loaded with great bales of RHEUMATISM is caused by the uric acid in the blood, and only by removing this poisonous acid can rheumatism be cured. The acid finds its way into the blood because the kidneys are weakened and do not throw it off from the system. Uric acid causes more sickness and suffering than any other form of poisoning. It irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable; causes rheumatism and neuralgia, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles, makes your head ache, and back ache, causes indigestion, stomach and liver trouble; you get a yellow, yellow complexion, the uric acid from the body. That is just what McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure does. It drives the deadly uric acid from the blood. It sustains the organs that assist in life and forces that make blood.

McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure

Dropsy I suffered with dropsy for some time. My feet and legs swelled. My hands were swollen to such a degree that I could not do my work. One dose of McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure relieved me, and two-thirds of a bottle cured me.

Cataract of the Bladder I suffered for ten years with cataract of the bladder. I paid out several hundred dollars for different remedies, but they did me no good. One dose of McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure relieved me, and two-thirds of a bottle cured me.
